

Philosophy

Athletics is an important part of the educational process. Without athletics, students would not have the real idea of hardships. I believe we have a direct impact on the student/athlete. We are here to help mold and shape them into productive and successful people. We are building our future leaders. The athletic program shapes bodies, hearts, minds and behavior. Athletics offer opportunities to learn fitness, proficiency, team commitment, respect for others, self-control and how to deal with both success and failure. I believe that we are here to help train them and to help them build a bright future. We can achieve this through strong discipline, good character, and creating a positive learning environment. We also must be supportive in their failures as well. Life is an ongoing change of wins and losses, up and downs, but we all must stay the course. Athletics will help build a young man or woman and help them prepare themselves for life. Athletics helps build strong unity, trust, and teaches family values as well. It teaches responsibility, commitment, and accountability. It encourages them to be the best they can be, even through the hard times. As educators and coaches, it is our job to push everyone toward becoming their best academically and athletically. A quote from a great book states, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it". Proverbs 22:6 (KJV) I believe with our support we can help train the child in the way they should go. Being positive and supportive through it all is very important to our training. With the help from the school and the parents, I believe each student/athlete will have a positive experience through athletics.